A home in Hanover, York County will be featured on a national TV show on Saturday. The homeowners say their house is severely haunted, with multiple ghosts and other entities.

Homeowner DeAnna Simpson says they've lived in the home for seven years, and put everything they had into buying it. She says she and her husband didn't find out it was haunted until soon after they moved in.

"We put everything into this house," says Simpson. "And we do want to move, but we would have to list it at such a price where we could recoup what we put in."

Simpson has ghostly photos, as well as photos from something that scratches people who come inside. She also has audio recordings of voices, children laughing, and dogs barking that were not in the house. (Rt: 'Shadow figure' captured by trail cam in basement)

"Five plus," she says of the number of ghosts in the house. "I have some here that are protecting me, some women here that are protecting me, but the majority are bad, dark forces, inhuman."

Simpson says one of the entities in the house is a demon. It appears in a photo as a 7-foot-tall shadow figure. While we were there, Simpson recorded orbs on her cell phone camera and it caught a clip of a shadowy hand reaching out.

When FOX43's cameras went inside, our photojournalist Nick Petrillo felt his hand burning and saw a scratch on his wrist. Simpson put Holy water on him.

"Because you're telling the story," she says. "Because you're putting it out there, because they don't want—that is there, I'm just telling you, right now that is their way of a warning."

Simpson has invited priests, paranormal researchers and mediums into the home. The house will be on "The Dead Files" on the Travel Channel on Saturday. She says the crew turned up evidence of grisly deaths that took place there. (Report from Fox43 website)

BOYS MORPHED INTO CATS, POLICE SAY

NIGERIA — Police in the city of Port Harcourt claim three boys have the ability to become cats at will.

The incident reportedly began when the officers became curious about a cat roaming the police station and decided to capture it. But when for some reason they tried to kill it, the cat “mysteriously transformed into a boy”, the men said.

The boy allegedly confessed that he and many others “of his kind” are capable of metamorphosing into felines with the sole purpose of “sucking human blood and and inflict their victims with diseases”. According to John, he learned the “art” from a man named Womadi.

Eze Ndubueze Wobo, ruler of the region, said that he had spoken with one of the alleged mentors who had confessed to him that the entire story was true. He was also told that these men recruit schoolchildren and then use items such as native alligator pepper, Local gin, Local kola nut, and packaged beef roll in order to initiate them.

Port Harcourt is the capital of Rivers State in Nigeria and has a population of 1,382,592.

Shapeshifting is the purported ability of a living thing to physically transform into another being, and it is present in works such as the Epic of Gilgamesh and the Iliad. The belief is also in existence in many cultures around the world, like the Native American skin-walker and similar creatures documented in African Shamanism. The most popular form of shapeshifting is called therianthropy, which allows a human being to transform into an animal and vice versa.

Last month, members of the Boko Haram terrorist organization, also in Nigeria, claimed to being attacked by the ghosts of their victims, who had ‘possessed the bodies of snakes and bees’. SOURCE: Cryptozoology News, August 4, 2014.
